

SUTLEY CASE RESUMED BEFORE JUDGE NICHOLAS AFTER THREE DAYS' REST

Juror Adrain Was Able to Take His Place in Box Having Recovered From Recent Illness

PROS. SMYTHE MAKES THE OPENING STATIMENT

Defense Claims Sutley Was Merely Spectator at Jail the Night of Lynching—Jury Taken to View Places Which Will Figure in the Present Trial.

After a rest of three days from the monotonous proceedings in the court room, Judge Nicholas in common pleas court Monday morning resumed the trial of the Quincy Sutley case.

The jury was fresh from their rest under the careful attention of Bailiff Legge. The eleven men, Juror Adrain remaining at the hospital, were given every opportunity to take plenty of exercise and recreation while waiting for the recovery of their fellow-talesman.

Bailiff Legge stated that the men were all in good health and spirits and enjoyed their little trips hugely. Sunday morning the men walked to the Holy Trinity Lutheran church at West Main and Williams streets where they heard an excellent discourse.

Sunday evening the men were taken to the Fifth Street Baptist church where the pastor, Joseph L. Bennett, preached.

Through the bailiff, Dr. McClure, who has had charge of Juror George Adrain, reported to the court that his patient was much improved and that the symptoms of mumps which were evident Friday, had disappeared and he believed that the man was sufficiently recovered to begin his work in the case for which he was selected. Mr. Adrain was in the box with the jury when court opened and looked to be in good health.

Prosecutor Smythe, when the court ordered the case to proceed, asked that an order be made that the sheriff take charge of the jury and conduct them over the ground which will be mentioned in the testimony.

Judge Nicholas gave both sides an opportunity to have one of their number accompany the jury but this right was waived by counsel for the state and the defense.

Sheriff Slabaugh was furnished with a list of the locations which it was desired that the jury view. Before the panel left the jury box, the court cautioned them that they were not to discuss anything that they saw during their absence from the court room and that nothing pointed out to them was to be regarded as evidence.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

It was evident at the morning session that counsel for the defendant had something on their minds and by many in the court room it was believed that the prisoner at the bar would change his original plea of "not guilty" to the charge contained in the indictment.

PROBERS

WILL HAVE PLENTY OF FINANCIAL BACKING STATES OPHA MOORE.

Harvey Garber, Bell Telephone Lobbyist, May Be Called From Europe to Testify Before the Grand Jury.

Columbus, May 8.—According to Opha Moore, secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' association, the man who brought the Burns detectives here to expose graft will not rest with the indictments already returned. He says he is receiving offers of financial aid from every part of Ohio and if the present backers of the probe withdraw their financial support it will make little difference. Moore is confident that 40 legislators can be indicted.

Governor Harmon's influence is on the side of a real probe, designed to spare no one. Harvey Garber, Bell telephone lobbyist who is on his way to Europe, may be asked to return and testify before the grand jury. Prosecutor Turner said today that the probe would be carried clear through to the finish. He thinks the report of insufficient evidence is being circulated by persons who are themselves in danger. The opposition to the probe appears well organized both in and out of the legislature and will put up a strong fight on all sides to weaken the probe.

PRES. DIAZ

HAS AGREED TO ALL OF THE REFORMS DEMANDED BY THE REBEL LEADERS.

Radicals Claim Plan Is a Fake Which Is Being Used to Cause Disarmament.

Mexico, May 8.—There is much speculation among Madero's friends as to whether he will accede to Diaz's message to the people regarding the latter's resignation. It is pointed out that although Diaz ostensibly agrees to the demanded reforms and agrees to resign there is no guarantee that he will keep his word. Many radicals claim the whole plan is a fake, aimed to cause the rebels to disarm and lose control.

Members of the cabinet today claim that Diaz has secured an enviable position by his proclamation. They say he has put Madero on the defensive and if the latter quibbles over the terms of peace he will show that the charges that personal ambition caused the revolution are well founded.

Washington, May 8.—Although no message has been received from Ambassador Wilson regarding Diaz's promise to resign, officials here take an optimistic view of the situation. Word from Wilson is expected hourly. It is believed here that serious com-viz, first degree murder to one of guilty to the lesser degree of crime, manslaughter. There was considerable delay in the case when the time arrived for the convening of court in the afternoon. Sutley was in consultation with his attorneys for the better part of a half hour.

At 1:30 o'clock Judge Nicholas took his place on the bench and the spectators in the court room waited for the next move with an air of expectancy. The jury filed slowly in and took their places and Prosecutor Smythe immediately started his opening statement of what the state expected to prove against the defendant, Quincy Sutley.

He first read the lengthy indictment against Sutley, and the others said to have been implicated in the lynching. Mr. Smythe stated that the state had placed on trial one of the actual murderers of Carl Etherington while heretofore only accessories to the fact.

The prosecutor described the attempt of Etherington to escape from the center of the city, his interception at the park, the shooting of Howard, the assault on the detective, his arrest and the attempt said to have been made at the jail to take Etherington from the officers. He described the mob and the speeches made to incite the rioters, the assault on any entrance to the jail and the assault on the inner doors.

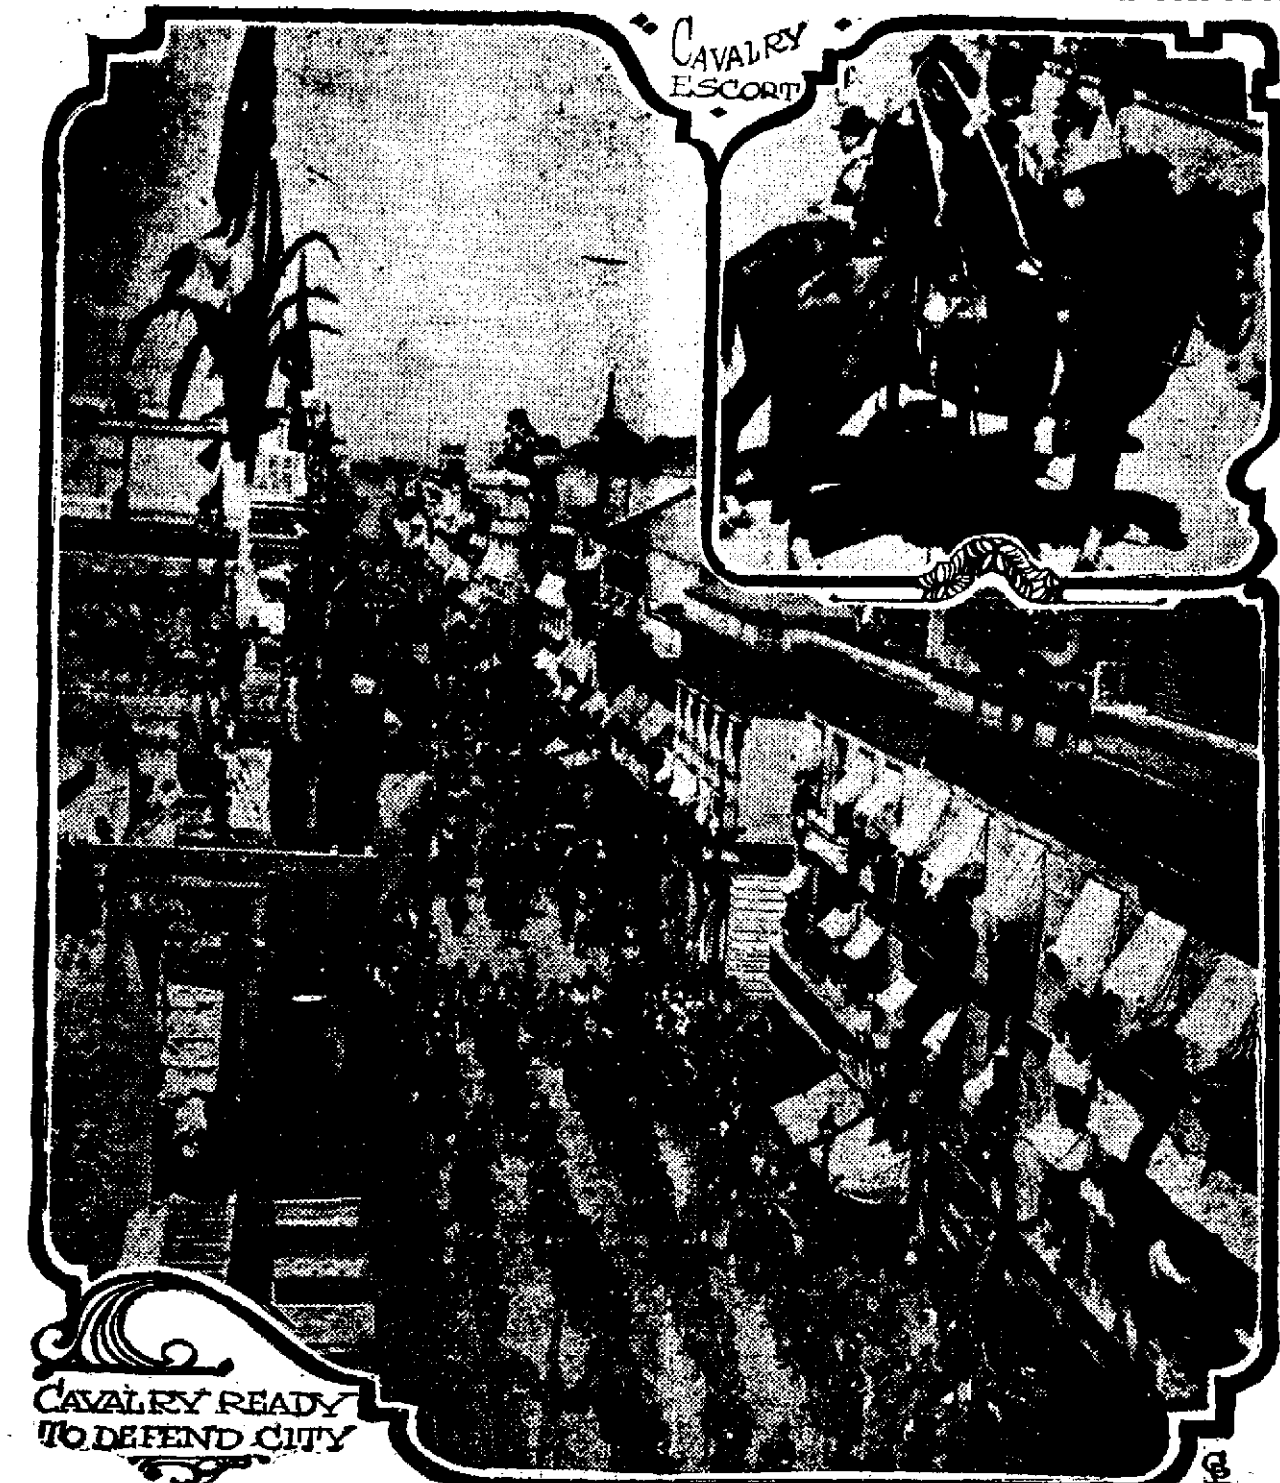

He said that Sutley first took part in the trouble when he assisted in the demolition of one of the inner doors. He described the seizing of Etherington and the trip to the pole where he was lynched. He stated that while the rope was being adjusted Rube Berger admonished them to desist and was assaulted and beaten by Sutley.

Attorney F. A. Bolton, chief counsel for the defense made a statement of the defendant's case to the jury.

He said Sutley was 23 years old, and was employed at the American Bottle company's plant, and on the day of the riots he was absent from the city, returning in the evening. That they would prove that he had nothing more to do with the case more than as a spectator. This closed the statements, the state's witnesses were sworn and the case proceeded.

Dr. L. L. Marriott, coroner at that time, who described his connection with the case. He told of the autopsy and that it revealed that death was caused by strangulation. In the cross-examination by Attorney James nothing new was developed.

SCENES IN MEXICO CITY WHILE TWENTY THOUSAND REBELS WERE ENCAMPED NEAR BY AND READY TO DESCEND UPON THE CAPITAL

While the rebels were encamped within twenty miles of Mexico City ready to attack in force, the streets of the capital were thronged with soldiers and civilians watching their evolutions. The photographs show a troop of cavalry ready to defend the city and an escort for a regiment commander.

ROBBERS MAKE BOLD ATTEMPT TO HOLD UP THE ELSNER GROCERY

"We want your money!" was the startling demand made by two masked men Saturday night of Councilman and Mrs. Hermann Elsner, as the would-be robbers pushed their way into the living room of the Elsner home at Hoover and Buckingham streets about 9 o'clock.

"Get out, or I'll throw you out," was Mr. Elsner's reply, thinking that some one was playing a joke on him. The same idea was in Mrs. Elsner's mind and she declared she would call the police, at the same time going to the phone and removing the receiver from the hook. One of the robbers struck her a vicious blow on the wrist with the butt of his revolver.

It was not until this hostile move was made by the marauders that the Elsners realized that they were in a serious predicament. The men were near an outside entrance, the door of which was standing open.

With rare presence of mind and indomitable courage, Mr. Elsner seized the larger of the robbers, shoved him against his pal and both were shoved or rather fell out of the door. It was quickly slammed shut and locked. At almost the same instant a revolver shot rang out and placations will be avoided if Madero's order withdrawing his troops from the border country is obeyed.

SHOES FIT THE TRACKS

East Liverpool, May 8.—W. W. Williamson is under arrest, charged with attempting to poison his mother-in-law, his wife and his son last night by putting strychnine in their coffee. When arrested he denied any knowledge of the affair, but the police say his shoes fit tracks found about the house. Williamson says he can prove a complete alibi.

GREAT DAMAGE BEING DONE BY FOREST FIRES

Whitewater, Manitowish, May 8.—Serious forest fires are reported for ten miles along the Canadian railroad from Des Moines to Prince Albert. The fires were caused by two derailed and burning engines. Large trunks and small towns have suffered the principal damage.

a bullet from the robber's gun splintered the door, but found no lodgement in the person of Mr. Elsner or his wife.

A hurry call brought the patrol wagon and several officers to the scene in less than five minutes, but there was no clue as to the identity of the men, except the meagre description which Mr. Elsner was able to furnish to the police.

Mr. Elsner operates a grocery store on Buckingham street. The store and the house are connected by a door. The two men, their features carefully and successfully concealed by handkerchiefs, entered the store and passed unmolested into the living apartments of the family. Mr. Elsner's son was also present with his parents but the demonstration made by the men with their revolvers intimidated the family to such an extent that they did not feel warranted in making any effort to capture them.

The police are following the slight clue furnished from the description of the men but there is little probability that they will be captured.

One of the men was described as being tall and rather slender while the other was short and heavy set. Nothing in the store or house was disturbed, so quickly were the men effected by Mr. Elsner.

BULLETS FALLING ON AMERICAN SIDE

El Paso, May 8.—Several hundred shots were exchanged and many bullets fell on the American side during the fight which began about noon just outside the city of Juarez.

NOTHING NEW IN THE PROBE

Columbus, May 8.—Stanley Harrison, assistant sergeant at arms of the senate, was the only witness before the grand jury in the bribery probe this morning. Summons were issued today for a dozen members of the legislature, lobbyists and others supposed to have been connected with the shady transactions.

The officials of the Ohio Coal Dealers' association were also ordered to appear with their books to show what part they took in the fight on the Green Miners' Screening bill and other bills affecting mining. Developments today show that Prosecutor Turner is digging deep into the history of certain bills heretofore unmentioned in connection with the boodle sensation.

BELIEVED TO BE FORTUNE OF DIAZ

New York, May 8.—Gold bullion valued at about $10,000,000, is held in the U. S. sub-treasury here and a Wall Street rumor says that it the property of President Diaz of Mexico. He is said to be arranging to save his entire fortune in this way if compelled to leave Mexico.

MURDER ON BATTLESHIP

Boston, May 8.—Following a quarrel on the battleship Nebraska, Charles Becker, colored mess attendant, shot and killed Alexander Allen, colored and at once surrendered to the officer of the deck.

WHAT IS IT?

JAIL DELIVERY EARLY SUNDAY MORNING, THREE PRISONERS ESCAPING

Owing to Crowded Condition of Institution Men Were Confined on Fourth Floor Where Minor Offenders are Kept.

KEY FASHIONED FROM BROOM HANDLE WAS USED

Rope Made of Bed Clothing Used to Reach Veranda Roof From Window on Third Floor—Hugh Hawkins, One of the Jail Breakers, Returns and Gives Himself Up to Sheriff Slabaugh.

PRISONERS WHO ESCAPED

CHARLES KORZENBORN, serving 30 days on a paternity charge.
CHARLES ALLISON, held awaiting trial for petit larceny.

HUGH HAWKINS, reformatory prisoner, witness in riot cases.

Hawkins was as good as his word and within a few minutes was again locked in the jail. Sheriff Slabaugh was notified of the escape and the police department asked to keep a lookout for the men but nothing was seen of them during the night.

In speaking about the escape, Sheriff Slabaugh explained that the crowded condition of the jail made it necessary to use the fourth floor for minor offenders. There are 34 prisoners confined in the jail which taxes its capacity to the utmost.

The fourth floor was originally intended for the women's department and the corridor doors are not equipped with the steel cage doors like the other corridors. An ordinary lock fastens the door and this was evidently regarded by former officials as sufficient precaution against the escape of the female prisoners.

Allison and Korzenborn, being minor offenders, were assigned to this corridor and had been there for some time. Hawkins, who was brought down to Newark from the Mansfield reformatory last Monday, was placed on this floor because the state's attorneys ordered that he be kept away from other prisoners who are held on murder charges growing out of the riots.

Hawkins, immediately after his escape, went to his parents home. It is claimed that he asked for money on which to escape from the city but he was persuaded to abandon this plan and return to the jail and surrender himself.

All day Sunday, the sheriff's deputies and the members of the police department kept watch for clues of the missing men. Several tips furnished the department were run down but without result. When the night force answered for roll call Sunday night they were again cautioned to keep watch for the escaped prisoners and it is believed that they will soon be in custody again.

A few minutes after 1 o'clock, the telephone in the office of the jail rang and when Mr. Emsweller, the turnkey doing night duty, answered a voice said:

"This is Hugh Hawkins talking. I got out with two others a while ago and I'll be back down pretty soon."

"This was the first intimation the officer had that anything was wrong. He immediately made an investigation and verified Hawkins' statement. The corridor door was open and the place empty.

Up to 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, no clue as to the whereabouts of either Allison or Korzenborn had been obtained, and it is thought that they have left the city and the county.

JUDGE NICHOLAS ISSUES ORDER THAT FRANK GRAEF REMAIN AT SANITARIUM

Before Judge Nicholas resumed the Quincy Sutley case in common pleas court Monday morning, he signed an order that Frank Graef, who suffered an amputation of his leg at the Sanitarium, and who is a defendant in the riot cases, should remain at the sanitarium until his health was so far regained that his life would not be impaired by being returned to the jail.

Dr. D. M. Smith, who has been attending Graef, was in the court room and took the witness stand to make clear to the court Graef's exact condition.

The court inquired into the matter very carefully and in reply to his answers, Dr. Smith said:

"I have been Mr. Graef's attending physician since 1886. Nearly 3 years ago he suffered a fracture of the knee which resulted in tubercular trouble, causing an enlargement of the leg at the knee joint.

"Several months ago the leg was amputated above the knee. The wound healed nicely but the patient is very weak from his confinement. He is suffering from anemic condition which "I have advised as much open air and has caused him much trouble from neuralgia. sunlight as it is possible for the patient to get. We are fearful of tuberculosis and the neuralgia is caused by the impoverished condition of his blood.

"It is my conscientious belief as a professional man that his return to the confinement of the county jail would cause a return of the tubercular trouble in the lungs or some other part of the body.

"I have had other physicians examine the patient and they agreed with me in the course I have pursued and the advice I have given."

Judge Nicholas expressed his confidence in the statement made by Dr. Smith and ordered that the defendant remain at the Sanitarium until he could be removed without any danger of shortening his life.

Tuesday night the members of the Newark Masonic club will hold their last dance of the second series at Assembly Hall.

Invitations were received by Columbus friends, Thursday, to the marriage of Miss Bertha Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Young, 850 Oak street, and Mr. Grove Montgomery of Newark. The ceremony will be performed at 8:30 o'clock on the evening of May 15, at the Broad Street Presbyterian church.

Miss Grace Young, sister of the bride-elect, will be maid of honor at the wedding, and there will be four bridesmaids, Miss Florence Montgomery.

ery of Newark, sister of the groom-elect, Miss Mary Owen of Newark, cousin of Miss Young; Miss Gladys Mayfield of Middlebourne, West Virginia, and Miss Trude Wooster of Toledo. Mr. Clyde Irwin of Newark, will be best man for Mr. Montgomery and the ushers will be Mr. George Herschberger of Newark; Mr. Flay Shlirer of Cleveland; Mr. Harold Young, brother of the bride-to-be, and Mr. Sinkins of Newark.—Columbus Dispatch.

The following from the Ohio State Journal of Sunday will interest the Newark friends of Mrs. Roy Brenholtz (Marguerite Matticks):

One of the interesting affairs of Saturday was Mrs. Alfred Brenholtz' reception in the afternoon at her home 93 Woodland avenue, for her son's bride, Mrs. Roy Brenholtz (Marguerite Matticks of Newark). There were about one hundred guests. Serving in the dining room the first hour were two brides-elect, Misses Bertha Young and Edna Sterner. The brides, Mesdames Charles Francisco and J. J. Stevenson, served the second half of the afternoon. A number of Mrs. Roy Brenholtz' friends from Newark attended, among whom were Mrs. D. W. Matticks, Mrs. S. W. Haight, Miss Helen Graef, Miss Gladys Beecher, and Miss Helen Blood.

On Thursday of last week, Mrs. I. Coates, 126 Chittenden avenue, entertained for Mrs. G. L. Price (Lotza Horn) of Newark. There were present: Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Price, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Minck, Mr. and Mrs. W. Stout, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Siebert, Mr. and Mrs. A. Delgarn, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Alton, Mrs. Fuller, Mrs. M. Robb, Miss Gillispie, Miss Julia Wolfe, Miss Fern Coates, Miss Oleta Coates, Miss Gayle Alton, Mr. Carl Muck, Mr. George Leslie, Mr. Hugh Mitchell and the host and hostess.—Columbus Dispatch.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Baker of North Tenth street delightfully entertained a few of their friends Saturday evening. The event was a miscellaneous shower given in honor of Miss Vera Dee Jones and Mr. John Danner, whose marriage will take place in the near future. The evening was spent in games of various kinds and the showering of beautiful gifts upon the guests of honor.

The guests were Miss Vera Dee Jones and Mr. John Danner, Misses Bertha Hopp, Maud Sanford, Mary Danner, Lottie Baker, Ethel Deming, Mabel Alward, Louis Black, Gladys Day, Edna Lum, Emma Boggs, Ocie Miller, Marie Bolin of Cleveland, and Messrs. FRANKLIN—LEE
Cary Franklin, a young farmer of St. Louisville and Miss Myrtle Ethel Lee of Chatham, were married Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock by Rev. G. W. Applegate at his home in West Main street. The newly wedded couple went to housekeeping immediately in a cozy home on a farm near St. Louisville.

Mrs. John J. Carroll has issued invitations for an afternoon bridge party on Wednesday at her home in Hudson avenue. The event honors Mrs. C. W. Miller who leaves soon for her new home in Mankato, Minn.

The brightening circle of The King's Daughters will meet Tuesday afternoon with Miss Spray Douce, in West Church street.

Meteoric Showers.
How many know that the earth is getting larger each year from the fall of meteoric matter on its surface and that such matter is of no small weight? One hundred tons a day is the estimate made by Young. This, he says, would make a layer one inch thick over the entire earth in 1,000,000,000 years if we assume this meteoric matter to be three times as heavy as water. But another effect has to take place at the same time. As the earth is getting larger the force of gravity gets larger, and we are being attracted with more force toward the sun. But the centrifugal force keeping us away from the sun gets much greater, too, and, in fact, more so than the sun's gravity, the result being that we are gradually increasing our distance from the glowing orb.—New York Tribune

Recipes for May 9, 1911.
Rice, Ham and Tomato Sauce. Boil one cupful of well washed rice in salted water until tender, then drain. Have ready a cupful or more of finely chopped ham, a pint of good tomato sauce and a heaping tablespoonful of chopped parsley. On a hot shallow dish spread half of the rice, cover it with half of the ham and pour over enough of the sauce to moisten. Add the remainder of the ingredients in the same order, sprinkle with the parsley and send at once to the table.

Rhubarb Pie. Peel the rhubarb and cut quite fine. Cover the pie plate with good rich crust. Fill with the rhubarb, heaping it in the center. Add one cupful of sugar mixed with two tablespoonfuls of flour. Some like to add a little grated nutmeg. Cover with an upper crust, cutting a slit in the center. Bake in a quick oven. If the juice threatens to overflow in spite of the flour used roll a sheet of glazed note paper in a small tube and push it down through the center until it almost touches the lower crust. Do not remove until the pie has partly cooled.

CATARRH DOCTOR

Cures Catarrh, Acute or Chronic, or Money Back.

Would you pay one dollar to rid yourself of disgusting catarrh? Then go to Evans' drug store today and ask him for a Hyomei outfit and you will not only engage, but you will own outright a little catarrh doctor that has cured more cases of catarrh than all the catarrh specialists on earth.

In the $1.00 box which contains the Hyomei outfit, you will find a little hard rubber vest pocket inhaler.

Into this inhaler you pour a few drops of Hyomei. Then all you have to do is breathe through the little inhaler, either through the nose or mouth, according to where the catarrh is located.

When you breathe the HYOMEI you breathe a powerful yet soothing, antiseptic air, which as it passes over the inflamed and germ ridden membrane penetrates every fold and crevice, and destroys germs completely.

Stomach dosing never cured catarrh, sprays and douches always fail; and why? because they don't get where the germs are, and as catarrh is a germ disease you must kill the germs, before you can cure catarrh. HYOMEI is guaranteed by Evans' drug store, and by druggists everywhere to cure catarrh, coughs, colds, croup and sore throat.

SEEKS DIVORCE AFTER 27 YEARS OF SEPARATION

Charges Wife With Being a Scold—News of the Licking County Courts.

William Eswine, by his attorney, Eugene Moore, has commenced suit for divorce in the Probate court against his wife, Nancy J. Eswine. The parties were married in July, 1884. Plaintiff says that at the time of the marriage the defendant was living on a farm in Lima township, consisting of about 60 acres; that she has a life interest in the farm and is still living on it and receiving the income therefrom; that at the time of the marriage defendant was a widow. For cause of action plaintiff charges defendant with extreme cruelty in scolding him and refusing to have anything to do with him; that in 1884 the defendant ordered him to leave and never come back again and threatened to do him bodily harm if he did so, that he has not lived with her since that time.

Common Pleas Court.
In the case of J. H. Hawley vs. Watson Price and Seymour Smith, a line fence dispute the court and jury listened to the arguments of counsel on Monday morning, and the court immediately charged the jury, outlining the case and instructing the jurors as to the law in such proceedings.

Heart and Home Talks by Barbara Boyd Practical Housekeeping.

The Other Side of Housekeeping.

It is only in retrospect that the other side of housekeeping can be seen. At the time of the ordeal, nothing but its cold, hard facts thrust themselves upon us. Its aura of romance is not visible.

Like the quaint saying of a familiar character in fiction who says that "instead of getting to heaven at last, she is going all along," we may believe in scattering our cleanliness through the year, instead of having an orgy of it at stated seasons. But if we live in certain kinds of villages, we probably haven't the courage to live up to our convictions. If we don't clean house, we know with what a suspicious sniff Mrs. Jones will greet our remark that we clean the house every week instead of twice a year. We know the suspicious glances that will wander over picture-rail and chandelier, and under davenport, and into corners when neighbors whose homes are redolent of soap and new paint, wander into ours. We can hear the comments of the village when our house is tranquil and serene during the upheaval that affects all others. And so, we clean house. We go about for two weeks wearing a sanctified expression, and living in the radiance of the martyr's halo above our brows. As the tribulations incident upon housecleaning increase, we wonder resignedly what more fate can have in store for us. And when we creep dismally to bed the night it is all finished, our hair full of dust, our hands cut and scarred, our fingernails broken, every muscle and bone in our body aching, we pray fervently we may die before another housecleaning season rolls around.

But when we are rested, and we sniff with pleasure the fragrant odor of cleanliness throughout the house, and everything is bright and shining, and we go out doors and breathe in the llacs, if we did not see the daffodil, and seek out shy violets in fence corners, even if we have missed the pink surprise of arbutus under brown leaves, we begin to see the other side of housecleaning.

We remember the day a motor whirled up, and a marvelously good-looking man presented a letter of introduction from a friend. Our hair was in wisps. There was a smudge on our nose. The old dress we had on, the waist of which always would "ride up," had ridden up worse than usual. In fact, our appearance was at its lowest ebb of respectability and we had a frantic idea at first of pretending to be the maid and saying the mistress was out. But we had opened and read the letter under the amused eyes of the stranger, and so this course seemed inadvisable. So with a very red face, we entertained him to the best of our ability. Now, gathering violets, we laugh at the memory. But we couldn't laugh then.

Then, we think of the day we ate our lunch on a drygoods box on the porch, with a very thin screen of vines between us and an unsympathetic, cynical world; and of how the neighbors' children pressed their noses against the fence and made remarks at every mouthful. We remember our murderous desire to get a club and go for them, and how we discoursed on the proper training of children to the woman who was helping, knowing that she would be working in these very neighbors' houses in a few days and would repeat all we said, and we didn't care if she did, and hoped that it would open the neighbors' eyes to what horrid, ill-mannered offspring they had. We wondered rather regretfully now if these neighbors were mad.

Dozens of these incidents we recall now and laugh at them. But at the time they irritated and exasperated and annoyed. And as we go back into the bright, clean-smelling house, we think a bit contritely that next time we clean house, we will make a less lugubrious performance of it by seeing both sides of it at the same time.

BORAH RESUMES FIGHT IN SENATE

Hopes to Force Vote on Direct Election.

ACTION WILL BE DELAYED.

Long Debate Will Be Used in Effort to Kill the Measure—Utmost Liberty in the Matter of Debate on the Tariff. Much Talk Intended For "Home Consumption" Has Been Heard.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.
Washington, May 8.—[Special.]—Senator Borah is going to make the same effort to force a vote on the resolution for the election of senators by direct vote that he used in the short session. That he will have a hard fight to get a vote there can be little doubt. That a vote was allowed in the last session was because a careful canvass showed that the necessary two-thirds vote could not be gained in its favor in the senate.

Senator Borah is confident that the resolution will now pass without the Sutherland amendment. This is very important, for it is known that with the Sutherland amendment the resolution will be defeated in the house or fail of ratification by the states. That an effort will be made to kill the resolution or postpone it by a long debate seems likely, but it takes a mighty strong minority to accomplish any such result in a session of unlimited length.

Plenty of Time.
When the Republicans come to analyze the proceedings of the present session of congress they will be compelled to acknowledge that there has been the utmost liberality in the matter of debate and discussion. In fact, the tariff debate has been "running out of time" as an old political farmer was often heard to remark when discussion became dreary and no one cared to listen.

Much "home consumption" talk has been heard, and each man has said what he thought would be most pleasing to his constituents when the speeches are sent broadcast among the people for their perusal. "Talk is cheap" in congress these days.

"Taking it on Gradually."
"You seem to fit into the senate pretty well," I remarked to John Sharp Williams of Mississippi. "Do you think so?" he replied. "I am taking it on gradually—just 'gradually'."

But for a new senator he has done pretty well. He became a member of the steering committee of the minority and a member of the finance committee, the most important committee in the senate. That is not so awfully gradual. Most senators wait many years before getting such honors.

Best Decorated Rooms.
When the capitol building was completed two rooms side by side were decorated especially for the military and the navy committees. For years they have been used for the purpose, but by recent changes they have become the rooms of the committee on appropriations, of which Senator Warren is chairman.

Warren was chairman of military affairs, but he liked the rooms so well he did not move. The decorations suit him. Not only that, but the Wyoming senator is quite a beau, and often there are luncheon parties in his rooms, when official society is well represented. The frocks and hats of the women seem to fit in well with the gayly decorated rooms which have come to the Wyoming senator.

Where They Went.
Minority Leader Mann was telling of a trip he made as usual. "Where did you go?" he was asked. "We went from Chicago City to Delaware City," replied Mann. "Now do you know anything more about it than before?"

And they did not, although it is part of a great scheme which J. Hampton Moore has for an inland waterway. The present canal connects the Chesapeake and Delaware bays.

Familiar to Smoot.
In the general change of committee rooms in the senate, such as has never been known by the oldest inhabitant, Senator Smoot of Utah finds himself in the room so long occupied by the committee on privileges and elections. He is familiar with this room. Here he spent many an hour when for nearly two years the committee was trying to find reasons why he should be ousted from the senate because he was an apostle of the Mormon church. It must be quite a satisfaction to him to sit in the room now as one of the most powerful men in the senate, for there is no denying that he is a very influential man.

Sandglass Abandoned.
In order that the time apportioned among members of the house during debate might be accurate a sand hourglass has been bought. One tube runs an hour, another fifteen minutes and still another five minutes. But it did not stay on the speaker's table long.

"We had to abandon it during the tariff debate," remarked Mr. Crisp, the clerk at the speaker's table. "We found that it was altogether too accurate." With the latitude allowed for debate there was no chopping off members who overrun the time allotted to them.

SUNDAY CLOSING OF POSTOFFICE

As per instructions from Washington there was very little done at the local postoffice Sunday. The carriers made no collections or deliveries of mail. The general window of the postoffice was kept open for a short time, in order to accommodate business men and those expecting important letters.

MOTHERS' DAY CELEBRATED BY MODERN WOODMEN

Cedar camp, No. 4727, Modern Woodmen of America, observed Mothers' Day, Sunday, May 7, at the Fifth Street Baptist church. The neighbors assembled in the hall at 6:30 o'clock and marched to the church in a body. A very interesting sermon was preached by Neighbor Rev. Joseph A. Bennett, on "The Modern Woodmen and Mother." The sermon was very much enjoyed by the neighbors and others who were present. Several very beautiful songs were rendered by the choir.

WEAR EVER Aluminum Ware Demonstration All This Week

During the entire week the demonstrator will be glad to give any instructions desired and answer any questions in the use and care of "Wear Ever" Aluminum Utensils. Come in and see the demonstrator. Do not be afraid to ask questions.

Following is the week's program:

MONDAY AFTERNOON.
Demonstrator will perform the milk boiling test in "Wear Ever" Sauce Pan, and will also show that burning food in "Wear Ever" utensils does not injure them.

TUESDAY.
Demonstrator will bake cake in "Wear Ever" Baking Pans, showing superiority over tin and granite pans commonly used.

WEDNESDAY.
Demonstrator will bake griddlecakes on combination aluminum and iron griddle, showing the "Wear Ever" Griddle does away with worry, dirt, grease and smoke.

THURSDAY.
Demonstrator will make a pot roast in "Wear Ever" Windsor Kettle, without the use of water, thus retaining all the natural flavors of the meat.

FRIDAY.
Demonstrator will cook preserves or fruit in "Wear Ever" utensil, without stirring, showing saving of labor and time.

SATURDAY MORNING.
Demonstrator will fry mush in "Wear Ever" Frying Pan, showing how this may be done without mush sticking.

SATURDAY P. M.
Demonstrator will melt sugar and chocolate in "Wear Ever" Pans without stirring and adding water or grating chocolate.

TACK THIS UP FOR REFERENCE.

Surprising the Bullock.

In times of crisis and worry a kind word has been known to have surprisingly good results. The unexpectedness of such a word is perhaps the secret of its force. A late book, "On the Wool Truck," backs the moral with an anecdote.

A team was working on the Broken Hill road, and a bullock—the Beezlebub of the team—had gone obstinate, and the coach was passing. The whip was swinging, and some apt remarks were just forming on the back of the teamster's tongue when he caught sight of a clerical hat on the front seat and just in time thought better of it. He coughed politely.

"Ahem—Strawberry," he said, "proceed."

To his obvious astonishment Strawberry proceeded.

The Indian's Vision.

More or less wonderful accounts have from time to time been given of the powers of vision possessed by savage races. During a British anthropological expedition to the Torres strait the visual faculty of the natives was carefully tested, and from these tests the conclusion was reached that the excellence of vision shown by the savages has a psychological origin—that is to say, it arises from knowing what to look for. When the civilized man acquires familiarity with the environment he can see as far as they can. Thus the power of an Indian to tell the sex of a deer at such a distance that distinguishing features like antlers were invisible was found to rest upon his knowledge of the peculiar gait of the male deer.—Scientific American.

Wondrous Tact.

As an example of graciousness and tact Matthew White tells in Munsey's Magazine of a London clergyman who was called on to address an audience of actors. Alluding to the better social status of the players, the clergyman said that in former days it was sometimes customary to brand them as vagabonds and bore a hole in their ears with an awl, that the citizens might thus be forewarned. "And who knows," the clergyman added, "but that it is a survival of an endeavor to hide this mark of indignity that causes some of the actors even today to wear their hair long?"

Daddy's Bedtime Story

The Pelican Is Not So Very Meek

"HAVE you ever heard, children," began daddy, "of the mother pelican that plucks the feathers from her breast to make a nice soft nest for her little pelicans?"

"Yes, sir," said Jack and Evelyn, "we heard all about that at school."

"H-m-m," said daddy, "suppose I tell you about some pelicans that soundly whipped two big foxes only a little while ago."

"Oh, please, daddy," they chorused.

"Well," said daddy, "this is all true, and it all happened on one of the big Atlantic steamships that make a specialty of bringing over menagerie curiosities. On board she had 1,400 pheasants, 1,000 partridges, 100 wild ducks and geese, 5 pelicans and 2 very rare blue arctic foxes."

"Everything went lovely until the fourth night of the voyage. Then the foxes gnawed themselves out of their own cage and gnawed themselves into a partridge crate, and before their appetites were satisfied they had killed and eaten twenty-five."

"Then they licked their blue mustaches and strolled around the hold for a little dessert. Why they didn't tackle the geese and the ducks goodness knows, but instead they bit their way into the cage occupied by the meek and mild pelicans."

"They must have heard somewhere, just as you did at school, that the pelican was what schoolboys call a 'clinch,' and they probably thought that the fact of dining on such a rare bird would be something worth while telling to the other animals when they arrived in America."

"And then the fun began. Squawks and howls and shrieks arose until everybody on the ship, from the captain down to the smallest mess boy (that's a helper of the cook, you know), was aroused and hurried to see what on earth was the matter with the furred and feathered passengers."

"And there they saw the twenty-five dead partridges and the nine pelicans blinking in their crate and looking as innocent as lambs. They saw also the ducks and geese and the rest of the partridges, but they couldn't see the foxes."

"All at once one of the mess boys who had crawled under the water tank yelled, 'Here they are!' and pulled them out. And they were about the worst looking pair of foxes ever seen. Their beautiful blue fur had been bitten out in patches, their ears were torn and bleeding and their bushy tails were nothing but apologies."

"Hurray for the pelicans!" cried Jack.

"I'm going to tell that story to my teacher," said Evelyn.

The MAN ON HORSEBACK

By WILLIAM-CHESTER
EASTBROOK

He could never have been "The Man on Horseback" had he not seemed much taller sitting than standing. On foot he was a stubby, clerical fellow; mounted, he was the Marshal Magnificent, after the populace's own heart. At work he was the humble old bookkeeper at Cass & Stacey's; at play, he was Mars, chapeau-crowned. On the one hand, nagging obscurity; on the other hand, dazzling publicity. To think that one's legs should make a difference like that! He despised those legs and the life he led on them, but he gloried in his torso and the occasional triumphs it brought him.

It must not be thought for a minute that horseback life held for him any visions of limitless desert or grassy plains, of long forested paths or of high-lifting mountain trails. He was bothered by no foolish cowboy, Bedouin, nor Cossack hankerings. He did not know life in the open; he did not care to know it in the open. He had never felt the tug and strain and quiver of horseflesh on the run; he didn't ride that way. The air of the town, a proper prancing gait, the crowd at the curb, the roar of the band, the swing of following legs and the drop of following feet, faces at lunumerable windows, the magic melting of traffic ahead, color, music, glitter, cheers—all these were plenty good enough for him.

Precocity, like its antonym, nearly always misses fire when aimed at a parade. The crowd will have nothing overdone, nothing underdone. It must have it done just right. That is the reason so many men on parade are failures. An ounce too shy or an ounce too vainglorious and they are lost forever. It is a fine thing to gauge instantly, over the ears of one's horse, the exact aesthetical demand of a street full of people. Old Marcus Degremont could do that. Where he got the knack of it, Heaven knows. One doesn't find such things on the leaves of a ledger.

The man who rides at the head of a parade successfully must possess that most rare of all faculties, the power to balance a long line of display. It is a sort of sublimated esprit de corps tinged with a sense of beauty and warmed by a fine altruism toward all the parts concerned. It is a combination that is as rare as a warrior who embroiders. Any marshal can make a display of himself, but there are few marshals who can make a display of the men behind them. Old Marcus Degremont could do that, too.

He could do vastly more than that, indeed; he could embody, at the head of a parade, the spirit that lay at the foundation of all its units. To make ten thousand spectators feel Fraternity when four thin lines of lodgesmen stripe the streets; to make ten thousand spectators see Public Improvement when civic societies follow the drum; Some day a municipal office will await a man like that and there will be a splendid living attached. His bread and butter will not have to depend upon the keeping of books. And there will be an adequate title attached also, so that the most unprincipled scoffer dare not wink the eye.

Is it any wonder that when strangers asked the townspeople who "The Man on Horseback" was that they should reply: "Why, that is our Colonel Degremont." Is it any less wonder that, when men meditating parades sought old Marcus Degremont, his wife should say, although her husband had never smelled stronger powder than she used in her biscuits, "Colonel Degremont is not in. Will you wait?" Or, "Colonel Degremont will be glad to talk the matter over with you, I'm sure." She always said Colonel Degremont, like that, as if some other Degremont were trying to steal his thunder.

All this was before the Spanish war. There was a real colonel in town now, to say nothing of captains and corporals, and there were even privates, who were not averse to display. Marcus Degremont had welcomed them heartily, but he did not know that they would ever threaten the place he had made for himself. It had not seemed possible to him, perhaps, that a real commander could ever care for the occasional honors of mere make-believe.

Not that the town had known no real colonels nor privates before, but that those of its acquaintance were quiet old men with dimming eyes and slackened steps, who had fought in the Great War and were forever tired of battles and display and wanted henceforth but a warm fireplace and the honor, once a year, of walking with flowers to the graves of their fallen comrades.

But these latter-day Spanish war veterans, with their ardent zest of life, their youth, their rollicking irresponsibility, their khaki uniforms so jauntily simple, their boyish faces, their resilient shoulders, their slender waists, their swinging steps, and their fine long legs—these young veterans of a young war were the ones to make things hard for him.

Lancy was the new colonel's name. He was a tall, splendid-looking fellow with an incurving back, but with not much chest to speak of. Marcus Degremont had noted that chest at once. It was not a swelling chest; Marcus Degremont could inflate his chest till it strained the cloth of his stent uniform and caused the brass buttons to protrude almost to bursting. That was the pity of it; his legs had been cheated to perfect his chest.

He had that military countenance and that commanding poise of the head seen in good pictures of Major-General Hancock. He had the same soldierly white mustache and the same eyes. His skin was inclined to ruddiness and it had a habit of purpling slightly when he was excited—a warlike shade which might have pleased any soldier. His hair was snow white, and was worn like the dashing Logan wore his, combed straight back and long.

And his legs? We say of crippled legs, "They are crippled," and that is all; further, pathos forbids. But one could only say of Marcus Degremont's legs that they were funny. That is, one said it until one's making a solemn, dubious leg in front, while its mate lagged dispiritedly.

What did those legs cost him? Times innumerable during the Rebellion he had responded to the call for men, his heart burning with patriotism, and had each time been refused, until, tired of having him about the recruiting station, the sergeant had pointed to his legs, smiling significantly. After that Marcus Degremont gave him no more bother.

Life had not, however, been entirely without its triumphs, its glory. The town could not recall when he had not let its parades. By some hazy process it had chosen him, and having chosen him, it abided him, on parade. It obeyed him by platoons, and playing at war sometimes contrives. Then, too, he was a man of affairs, and had been a social lion before the war. There were other reasons why he was to be feared, too trivial to be set down here.

When it doesn't cost any more, the people like the real thing, and Colonel Lancy was the real article. Did you doubt his rank, there was his commission in black and white. There is no winking the eye when his name was mentioned. If not a real man of war, he was a man of war's alarms, which is the next best thing. He liked display even as Marcus Degremont liked it, and he was young and rich and handsome. The air of the town, a proper prancing gait, the crowd at the curb, the roar of the band, the swing of the following legs and the drop of the following feet, faces at lunumerable windows, the magic melting of traffic ahead, color, glitter, music, cheers—all these had their lure for him, too.

Is it any wonder that old Marcus Degremont felt the ground slipping from beneath his feet?

What made his position intolerably bitter was the fact that after thirty years Dick Leyden was coming home—Leyden, the one real friend of his whole life, except his wife. He was coming home, honored of men, to find him still the nonentity, the drudge, the clerk. And life had been equally hard for Leyden, but he had not tired until he had hawked his dove of success from the sky, while he—he groaned and his head dropped wearily into the worn hollow of his chair as he sat before the fire the night he heard that Leyden was coming and that the town meant to give him a properly fitting welcome. There was to be a triumphal procession to escort him from the station, through the principal streets, to the old house which had been his birthplace; and afterwards many distinguished citizens would speak their word of greeting.

"They will ask you to ride at the head of the procession, Marcus," said his wife, brightly, setting delicate stitches in a bit of nappery.

"No," said he, bitterly, "it will be Lancy."

"How absurd! You can't imagine Colonel Lancy is to permanently supplant you? What happened was merely a tribute to the returned soldier. Besides, the committee would think no one so fitting to lead the procession as Dick's old friend."

"Nobody recalls the friendship, I'm afraid. It was too long ago. And Heaven knows it's no wonder they shouldn't connect us, Dick in his prosperity, and I in my—"

"I won't have you saying things about yourself," she cried, coming quickly to his side, and stooping to press her sweet old face against his. "You are making yourself wretched about nothing. Undoubtedly the place at the head of the column will be offered you as usual. And Dick will understand that in your way you also are preferred of your fellow-men. Oh, you'll see! The committee will wait on you to-morrow."

But the committee did no such thing, although he did not leave the office until later than usual the next day. Indeed, it was nearer seven than six when, after a last anxious glance of searching down the thinning street, he finally took off his black sateen sleeve protectors and got wearily into his coat.

There was a letter from Leyden awaiting him at home. He had written briefly to say that he was coming, and, speaking of his life since he had been absent, he wondered if, after all, Degremont's way had not been the wise way, the better—to stay quietly on in the old town, the spot which had been beloved of their fathers, making himself the more secure as time went by in the place he held there.

Marcus Degremont's face spotted with color like a girl's, and he dropped the letter hastily into the fire lest his wife should ask to read it and the irony of it scorch her soul. His place! He had none. He was not even remembered. Neither as friend nor citizen was he bidden to take any part in the home-coming ceremonies. And what would it not have meant to him to have done so? His heart leaped at the thought of it. He would have made it such a parade as the town had never seen. He would have done it for Leyden's sake, and for his own, seeing him at its head, would have remembered him so, when, his brief sojourn over, he would have gone away.

At the moment the street bell rang and his wife brought in a command from the committee. She stood back of his chair, leaning over his shoulder as he opened it.

"I told you so," she triumphed. "I knew they wouldn't think of trying to get along without you."

He drew the brief lines from their cover and they glimmered there, brighter than she hung in silence over him, the committee desired him to head the procession of the parade.

His hands dropped to his shoulders and pressed into the chair when he would have started up violently, words of furious protest upon his lips, his heart bursting with the outrage of it all.

"You will do it, Marcus," she said, "you'll do it that no one may say that you were hurt. You can stand it—the mortification and the disappointment and the sense of ingratitude. But they mustn't pity you!"

So, on that day which might have been the greatest and happiest of his life, old Marcus Degremont rode at the head of the third division. He rode his own mount, Pompey, a chestnut sorrel with a white mane and tail, and the walking gait of a conquering war horse. The mount was as familiar to the people as the man himself.

He sat in the saddle exactly as he had sat for years. He held himself so for her sake, who would be watching for him, love and rebellion, mortification and passionate protest filling her, but with her old head carried high, and an indomitable smile for all who glanced her way.

After much delay Lancy finally got the parade in shape and started it off towards the depot. He looked uncommonly proud as he rode at its head on his dainty-stepping, beautifully muscled horse. Bands were playing and people were cheering. The old thrill was in the air and Degremont's blood began to race. But there, blotting out the brightness of the day, was Lancy's slender, impudent figure, and he wheeled Pompey half-way about that he might not see it.

Then a shout brought him sharply around. Down the street from the first division, four black horses hitched to a float swung about, toppled their driver from his seat, and came plunging madly back through the line of parade. To Degremont, the street before them seemed to lift in the middle, spilling colorful rivulets of paraders toward the curb. A panicky mob was instantly evolved from the orderly ranks. Men pushed and struggled and fought to get out of the uncertain course of the frightened animals. Drivers lost their heads and tried to pull into nearby alleys, jumbling the line of vehicles inextricably. The sidewalk crowds jammed ruthlessly into store entrances.

Degremont spurred Pompey toward the runaways. At the second corner they swerved suddenly, crashed the rear wheel from a projecting float, and swung toward a flower-bedecked phaeton that had pulled into the curb. The woman in it tried to lift her two little children out of the way.

Lancy, who had come galloping behind the runaways, shouting futilely, saw her and called to her in a frenzy of alarm. At the moment old Marcus Degremont swept by. He seized the nearest horse by the bit and the force with which he came pulled the leaders to their knees and broke the pole of the float, the splintered and stopping within a foot of the phaeton's wheels.

A great cheer went up from the dense crowd and Lancy flung himself from his horse.

"Is your wife hurt, colonel?" asked Degremont, leaning down from his horse.

Lancy, an arm about his wife, reared up and gripped the gauntleted hand. "No, no hurt, thank God! You saved her, and the children. . . . Take my place," he added. "Nobody but you can straighten things out in time now. And it was your place, anyhow—it shall always be your place."

A moment later, because of that magic which was his, scattered columns were reassembling, floats and vehicles were taking their old positions, bands began to play, flags that had been abandoned were waving again, and Pompey and his rider, both unmindful of that terrific strain of the muscles during the second's onslaught against the blacks, took their old place at the head of the parade, the rider with his accustomed martial bearing, the horse with his conquering step.

Degremont massed the first division in the square before the station, the others stretching away in beautiful, streamer-like lines. The train was just in, and a few minutes later the welcoming committee came out with their distinguished guest.

Cheers started in the square and ran down the lines. With uncovered head, the visitor started forward to his carriage, then glimpsed the splendid old figure at the head of the parade.

"A minute, gentlemen," he said, and ran out in the square like a schoolboy, to grab Marcus Degremont's hand.

There was a pandemonium of cheers at that which did not cease till Leyden returned to the committee. "This is a proud day to me, to be thus honored, and to give my old friend honored also," he remarked to the chairman.

The carriage fell in behind the marshal, and his staff and the parade was resumed. Never, it seemed to Marcus Degremont, had his heart beat so proudly, never had Pompey stepped so high.

On the tiny balcony of their old-fashioned house, one of the last residences left in the business district, Mrs. Degremont awaited the parade.

There was hurt in her heart and, proudly unchast, she turned her head from the glittering staff and tried to keep her gaze on the distant third division where she thought her husband must be. Then her woman's curiosity got the better of her and she permitted herself one swift glance in the direction of the staff. No word of what had happened had come to her.

Just as he had done many times before when he reached that balcony, Degremont turned his horse slightly, raised him in for a second, and swept a gallant salute to the old figure above.

His wife stared in astonishment. For Marcus! Had there been a miracle! Ay, but she had felt all along that something like that must happen! What it was she did not know did not care. He had been spared, cruelly. He had kept his place of honor. That was enough.

She snatched her old lace handkerchief from her bosom and waved toward him, following him as best as she could see him, and releasing altogether the tribute of the distinguished statesman in the carriage who came her there, had bowed profoundly and lifted his hat.

"I don't have you saying things about yourself," she cried.

glance reverted to the splendid body above them. They were thin legs for so large a body and ridiculously short. Below the knees they bowed inward as well as sidewise. When relieved alternately from the weight of the body, as in walking, the rearward curves straightened slightly, so that, viewed from behind, the calves of the legs—twisting at the trousers—seemed carrying on a humorous conversation by winks. The left kneecap was larger than the right and was thus enabled to hold the trousers from when the parade was over it promptly forgot all about him, by platoons. For that is the way of the crowd with a man whose daily life is as insignificant as its own. It is difficult for the Marshal Magnificent of the hour to redeem the Bookkeeper Obscure of the year.

Shortly after the soldiers came home from Cuba there was a parade, and Lancy rode at the head of it. Although he had not seen any more real service than had Degremont, he wore the halo which even

ELECTRICAL SHOW IN THIS CITY MAY 12-13

An Electrical show is to be held in Newark on the nights of Friday and Saturday, May 12 and 13, by the Ohio State University. The purpose of the show is two fold. In the first place it is desired to give the people of Newark an opportunity to see the very latest developments in the application of electricity to twentieth century needs; and, also to show them what the university is accomplishing in the preparation of young men for the profession. There will be two classes of exhibits, the industrial exhibits furnished by the leading electrical manufacturers of the country, and also the students' exhibits, comprising thesis, regular laboratory and special work.

The students have been working for the last few months on some stunts such as the speaking arc light, i. e., an arc light that will actually reproduce in the flame the human voice, cooking by wireless, ordinary electrical cooking is such an every day affair that something new has been devised.

transmission of pictures by electricity; welding in water; X ray and high tension demonstration, together with many others that will interest the general public.

One feature will be the model monorail car which has never been seen in Ohio. This car will be run on a suspended cable instead of a track in order to better demonstrate its perfect stability under all conditions. The car is a model. In principle, of the one that will be operated on the monorail system now building in England and has attracted considerable attention on this continent.

BUTTER-KRUST

Very Sensitive.
"I don't know what I am going to do with that kid of mine. He's always getting into fights. I jerked him up for it the other day. 'What do you mean by fighting on the public streets like this?' I asked."
"Well," he said, "Jimmy Montgomery said you were my father."
"Well, ain't I your father?"
"I s'pose you are, but a feller don't want it thrown up to him right in front of a crowd."—Boston Traveler.

A Taste For Soap.
Surely one of the queerest of tastes was that of the historian Prescott, of whose life in Rome Mrs. Hugh Fraser tells in "A Diplomatist's Wife in Many Lands." She says that he used to keep a cake of soap on his writing table and nibble at it constantly, "saying, when he was remonstrated with, that people should be clean inside as well as out."

Wigg—I saw you coming out of Dr. Biggie's house this morning. What have you got?
Wagg—Nothing now. I went to pay his bill.

Wife—Wasn't that a good box of cigars I gave you on your last birthday?
Husband—Yes; I never saw a better box, my dear.

NEXT SUNDAY MOTHER'S DAY

Governor Judson Harmon has issued a proclamation asking the citizens of the State of Ohio to observe Sunday, May 14, as Mother's Day.

In pursuance of which I ask the people of our city to observe the day generally and would ask that we live the day as our Mothers would have us live it; and if she be living, make it a day of pleasure for her through your loving thought, presence, or letter; if she be dead, then mayhap you can place the white flower of love and fidelity on her grave or at least wear a white carnation in memory of "the best Mother who ever lived."

JOHN M. ANKELE, Mayor.
May 8, 1911.

If you put stones under the posts of your corn house, have them thick enough and large enough so that the frost will not get below them and break them to pieces.

Again we say: Test the seed-corn before planting, for there's much poor seed in the country this year. And, also, treat the seed potatoes to prevent scab.

The Last Luxury.
Ten-year-old Arthur had been telling impressively of the number of servants employed in his home. He continued, "And our house is fixed so that if you want a drink or a window raised or to go upstairs or anything all you have to do is to pull a chain."
"But what do you want with so many servants in that sort of a house?" asked one of his hearers.
"Oh," replied Arthur, "we have the servants to pull the chains."—Judge.

Rubbing It In.
"You have kept my nose to the grindstone, Serepta," spoke her husband, nervously himself to say something at last, "for fifteen years."
"I've done more than that, Volney," snapped Mrs. Vick-Senn. "I have made you turn the grindstone."—Chicago Tribune.

Sensitive.
Garrulous Barber—As the sayin' goes, "There's always room at the top." Sensitive Customer—How dare you refer to my baldness!—Boston Transcript.

Even Tempered.
"Is your husband even tempered?"
"Yes," answered Mrs. Wuryd, "he's even tempered enough. He's just about as irritable one day as another."

WILD WEST SHOW HERE ON MAY 18

Leaping from the back of a rapidly galloping horse onto the neck of a flying long-horned steer and throwing it with his bare hands is but pastime for Buffalo Vernon, who comes to Newark on Thursday, May 18 with the Young Buffalo Wild West Show.

While he performs this feat with what appears to the audience to be the greatest ease, he is the only man in the world who has ever performed it. As his charging pony reaches the hot sides of the steer, Vernon leaps from his saddle on the animal's neck. He seizes the beast by its horns and with a quick jerk turns its head toward him. Then he sinks his teeth into the animal's lips and by one quick twist of his arms and his neck hurls the animal to the ground.

The feat performed by Buffalo Vernon is, however, but one of the feats of daring performed by the cowboys with the Young Buffalo Show.

In addition it has with it Ambrose Means, the "Lion Lassoer," of Africa; a whole tribe of Cheyenne Indians under command of Chief Thunder Bird, the richest Indian in the United States, whose street costume cost $1,800; a cowgirl's band; dozens of daring women of the plains who ride bucking bronchos and depict the life of the plains as braved by the hardy wives of the first western pioneers.

The Wild West Show will inaugurate its engagement in this city with a mile long street parade.

POLICE COURT

Jesse Dean, a wood worker, living in West Newark, was locked up by the police Sunday afternoon on complaint of his wife, who charged that he was beating her. She later called the police headquarters and asked that her husband be kept in jail until she could file charges against him in police court as she was afraid he would do her more harm. This was done and Monday morning Mayor Ankele fined him $5 and costs and gave him thirty days in the county jail.

The police department was called to a Jefferson street home Sunday afternoon, where a little "beer party" was in progress, the landlady claiming that she missed a roll of money containing $50 while she was absent from the room. The police arrested a foreigner, who was said to have taken the money. He surrendered a part of the money and said he took it for a joke. There was $10 missing from the roll.

"LAZARUS, COME FORTH!"

"SOME MOCKED"

"With What Body Do They Come?"—Texas Viewed as a Cemetery.

New York, May 7. — Pastor Russell preached today at the Academy of Music to an overflowing house. Crowds were turned away.

The text was, "WHEN THEY HEARD OF THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD SOME MOCKED" (Acts xvii, 32.) Pastor Russell made some prefatory remarks, explaining that although he had accepted the pastorate of the London Tabernacle congregation, this should not be understood to imply that he had any thought of leaving America permanently. He greatly appreciates the reverential spirit of the British, but this does not signify greater love for the land of his fathers than for the land of his birth. He accepted the London pastorate with the clear understanding that he must not be expected to serve there more than four months in the year. More and more he feels that his ministry is a general one. He specially thanks God for the privilege of addressing ten million readers through the press of America and Great Britain.

Resurrection Doctrine Unpopular.

Pastor Russell remarked that he was not preaching for popularity, but to re-establish "the faith once delivered to the saints," which, in a marked degree, had been lost during the Dark Ages. He stood on the broad platform of the Word of God, unrestricted by any creed fences made by men. He was answerable to no sect or party. He had already discussed the Resurrection subject for three Sundays and assumed that his interested hearers had kept in touch with him during his absence, through the press reports.

As some who heard St. Paul preach the resurrection of the dead mocked, so, quite likely, many have mocked as they read Pastor Russell's sermons. Nevertheless, the Word of the Lord standeth sure: "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." It was the great Teacher Himself who said, "All who are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life—perfection—they that have done evil unto the resurrection of judgment," crisis, trial (John v, 28, 29; Acts xxiv, 15).

To those that believe that the dead are more alive now than when they were alive, the doctrine of the resurrection must, of necessity, be foolishness. And whoever logically believes in the resurrection of the dead must, of necessity, consider the popular views on man's condition in death absurd in the extreme. There is no middle ground. Either man is dead when he is dead, as the Bible declares, and can have no further knowledge or hope, pleasure or pain, until awakened from death; or else man does not die at all when he seems to die—a theory with which the Bible is at war and which we claim has no foundation in fact or reason. It is a mythology. The entire heathen world believe this theory today. The doctrine came into the Christian Church in opposition to the "resurrection" doctrine long centuries ago—about the fourth century, when hordes of heathens were baptized and called Christians, with but slight appreciation of "the faith once delivered to the saints."

Raising of the Dead Will Be a stupendous Miracle.

Numerous objections to the resurrection are raised. It is claimed that it would be impossible for God to resurrect the dead, if they were really dead. It is claimed that, if our Lord's words were fulfilled and all that are in their graves should come forth, the earth would be so densely populated that it stood on each other's heads several rows deep all over the earth there would not be room for them. It is claimed that it would be impossible to provide food and raiment for so many. The resurrection is denounced as contrary to the laws of nature, according to all the history of the past.

The latter claim we admit. The resurrection of the dead will be something out of keeping with anything in man's experience. Only those who have an implicit faith in the Creator and in His promise will be able to receive this doctrine, which credits the Almighty with a Divine power exceeding anything else that could be imagined.

As to the other points, let us see: Many wise men in public positions are very unscientific, even when called scientists. They sometimes jump at conclusions in an astounding manner. For instance, we all know how some of these scientific gentlemen laugh at the Bible's records and declare that humanity has been upon the earth millions of years. If we ask for the proof they are astonished that their omniscience should be questioned. They knock a chip from a block of stone, look at it wisely, and declare it so many millions of years old. But a new school of geologists is arising which takes note of the fact that many of the rocks were evidently formed just as we today set our concrete blocks and turn them to stone within a few days.

Let us take the Bible as our authority. Let us believe what it says: that man was created about six thousand years ago. Let us note the gradual progress of the race. A reasonable and, we believe, liberal estimate of the entire number of the race since Adam is twenty thousand millions. Let us figure out how many square feet it would require to lay them each full length in graves. Then turn to the atlas. Look at the number of square miles in the State of Texas. Divide this into square feet, and what do we find? We find that more than twice the number of our large estimate of all who have ever lived could be buried in separate graves in that one State alone.

Can the Awakened Billions Be Provided For?

As for clothing, Mr. Edison tells us that new inventions are in progress which, ere long, will make clothing wonderfully cheap—"dirt cheap." "Mineral wool" is the first step in this direction. It sells cheaply by the ton. Further development is expected to make this fit for man's use as clothing. The supply is inexhaustible. The Scriptures declare respecting the Divine provision for the human family during the Messianic reign that "the earth shall yield her increase" and "the wilderness shall blossom as the rose," etc.

From every direction information is coming of new species of wheat and corn much more prolific than what we have been using. Additionally, there is recently an announcement of a method of magnetizing grains before they are planted, which will permit the raising of at least three crops a year in the temperate zones. Additionally, nitrogen is being extracted from the atmosphere and used to enrich the worn-out soils.

Furthermore, we may be sure that He who provided Eden for our first parents is abundantly able, as He has promised, to make of earth a Paradise, in which the blessing of the Lord will be upon humanity; and the earth, as the Divine footstool, shall be made glorious. Moreover, be it remembered that the Scriptures distinctly declare that the propagation of the species is intended merely for the present time and that those who will attain, in the New Age, to the resurrection will "neither marry nor be given in marriage." The propagation of the human race is intended to proceed only until the earth shall be filled. But over and above all this, the great Creator, Whose Plan is being worked out in man's creation, man's redemption and man's restitution, knows the end from the beginning and is fully able to do all that He has promised. If necessary, how easy it would be for Him to still further sink the bed of portions of the oceans and to raise up continents in the Atlantic and Pacific larger in extent than the present land surface!

However, we have nothing to say to those who "mock" at the Divine promise of a resurrection of the dead and who, because of a lack of faith in the Almighty, prefer the vain imaginations of the human mind to the positive promises of the Creator. We have merely thrown out some suggestions helpful to the faith of those who are really seeking Divine wisdom and who are in danger of being side-tracked by "science falsely so-called."

"Sleep With His Fathers."

It is in full accord with the promise of a resurrection that in the Bible teachings we read that "Abraham slept with his fathers"; and similarly read of kings, good and bad; and of Prophets, Apostles and others. Thus St. Stephen, the first Christian martyr stoned to death, we are told, "fell asleep." St. Paul tells us that some will be alive and remain to the coming of Messiah; and he remarks, "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed" (I Corinthians xv, 51). Again he tells us that we may comfort ourselves and each other as respects our dead friends and neighbors, that they all "sleep in Jesus" and are to be brought from the dead by Him. The whole world sleeps in Jesus, in the sense that their resurrection hope—their hope of awakening in the resurrection morning, is based upon the work which Jesus accomplished as the world's Redeemer.

No one will dispute that the Bible declares that the dead are asleep. It is, therefore, a proper and pertinent question that every Bible student should be prepared to answer—Where do the dead sleep, waiting for an awakening? Surely not in heaven, where all life and happiness; Surely not in the Purgatory which our Catholic friends feel so confident is somewhere. And surely not in the fiery hell of which fire testaments generally tell us. Surely the dead sleep in the Bible hell—sheol, hades, the tomb, the state of death. Thus it is written, "Many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake" (Daniel xii, 2). Hearken to the Master. Mary, Martha and Lazarus of Bethany were His particular friends. Lazarus took sick and the sisters sent word to the Master. "He whom Thou lovest is sick," Jesus gave no outward heed to the matter until the third day after, and then said to His disciples, "Our friend, Lazarus, sleepeth." They replied, "Lord, if he sleep he will do well." Then Jesus said plainly (coming down to their ordinary use of language), "Lazarus is dead." With His disciples He then went to Bethany.

The sisters were greatly disappointed. They had not thought of the possibility of their brother's dying, because they so thoroughly believed in the power of Jesus. Mary did not even go to meet her dear friend, the Lord, when He came. Martha met Him with the chilling remark, "If Thou hadst been here (if Thou had come) even when we informed You our brother had not died." Jesus did not dispute that Lazarus was dead, nor tell her that he was more alive than ever. He merely promised that her brother should rise again.

Martha replied that she knew that Lazarus would rise in the resurrection, at the Last Day. Jesus assured her that He would be the One Who would resurrect the dead, and that He was then present with her, intimating that she might ask even then for her brother to be revived. But Martha's faith was insufficient. When the Master asked, "Where have ye laid him?" she replied that it was now too late because putrefaction had set in—it was now the fourth day since his death. When Jesus finally went to Lazarus' tomb, He did not call him from heaven, nor from Purgatory, nor from a fiery hell, but from the tomb, saying, "Lazarus, come forth!" And the dead one came forth.

This wonderful exhibition of His power the Lord gave, to the intent that His disciples then and since might realize that in Him is vested the resurrection power, by Divine arrangement, and that there is to be a resurrection of the just and of the unjust; that all who are in their graves are to hear His voice and come forth. The Church class will come forth to perfection of life on the spirit plane. The world of mankind will come forth from the tomb imperfect, as they went into it, and will all have a test, to prove whether they are worthy or unworthy of restitution blessings and eternal life in the earthly Paradise.

"With What Body Do They Come?"

St. Paul held an imaginary discussion with doubters of the resurrection in his day. He has them inquire, "With what body will the dead return?" He replies that, as each kind of seed that is planted reproduces its own kind, so it will be in the resurrection of the dead. Whatever kind of seed is planted in death, of the same kind and nature will be the resurrection crop. The Apostle elaborates, showing that the whole world of mankind are of one kind of seed—human stock—and that therefore, in the resurrection time, they will come forth the same—humans. And they will come forth in practically the same condition in which they died.

But if we shall suppose rye to represent the human stock and can imagine a special treatment of some of that rye grain before sowing—changing it into wheat, then we would know that those changed grains would sprout and develop, not as rye, but as wheat. Thus the Apostle illustrates the resurrection of the dead—the Church. All are of Adam's stock, but some, a few—the spirit-begotten Church—experience a change of nature from earthly to heavenly. Hence they, in the resurrection, will come forth heavenly or spirit beings. He says, "Some, the world at large, will be members of the earthly Adam; others, a few, a 'little flock,' will be members of the second Adam—the heavenly Lord. The standard to which the world may expect to be awakened and, later, raised, will be the earthly standard represented in the perfect Adam. 'Like the earthly one will be the earthly ones' (the world). And 'like the heavenly one will be the heavenly ones' (the saintly Church, the Bride) (I Cor. xv, 45-48).

The First Resurrection Described.

It was not necessary that the Apostle should more particularly describe, at that time, the resurrection opportunity provided for the world of mankind, but it was very appropriate that he should give to the Church a more detailed explanation of the Divine provision for the resurrection of the Bride. Explaining this, St. Paul says, "Thus is the resurrection of the dead: It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. It is sown an animal body; it is raised a spirit body. For there is an animal body and there is a spirit body. As it is written, The first man, Adam, was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit" (I Corinthians xv, 42-45).

The Apostle declares of these who are begotten of the Holy Spirit and who make their "calling and election sure" and who, therefore, will have part in the First Resurrection—"As we have borne the image of the earthy we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. . . . Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God; . . . but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump" (I Corinthians xv, 49-52).

The resurrection of the Church is called a "life-resurrection," because all those experiencing it will be perfected in life—will be instantly and completely lifted out of death conditions. The world in general, on the contrary, will not come forth to a life-resurrection, but will come forth still partly dead, as mankind in general are today. The coming forth or awakening to them will be merely the beginning of their resurrection, their anastasis. Their raising up completely out of sin and death will follow, gradually, if they conform to the Kingdom rules. In the Divine appointment the thousand years of Messiah's reign are set apart for their resurrection—their gradual raising up to human perfection. The experiences of Messiah's Kingdom will all be helpful whether they be chastisements or rewards. They will all be reformatory. Only deliberate and wilful transgressors will be annihilated in the Second Death.

DRESDEN COPPED FROM THE C. M. A. AT WEHRLE PARK

Good Double Present to Witness the Double Headers—Athletics Defeated B. & O. Team in a Nicely Contested Game.

Dresden defeated the C. M. A. team at Wehrle Park yesterday afternoon by a score of 7 to 6.

The C. M. A. team should have won easily, but Miller allowed two runs to score in the fourth by an error of judgment in throwing the ball to third when he should have thrown it to first to catch the runner as he dropped the ball on the third strike and could easily have reached the side as there were two out. Crawford misjudged a fly in the ninth which proved costly as the ball rolled to the fence and two men scored.

Atwood pitched splendid ball, allowing eight hits and striking out thirteen.

The Newark-Marion scores were received at the park and announced by the umpire. About 400 witnessed the game.

Next Sunday the C. M. A. team will play the White Sox at Zanesville. Sunday's score:

NORTH HIGH WINS MEET FROM DOANE

North High easily defeated Doane Academy at Granville Saturday morning in a dual track meet by the score of 61½ to 39½. The meet was held on Denison "1" field, with a heavy track. In nearly all the events North easily came out with firsts. Sparks, a new find of Coach Swaine, surprised the large crowd present by obtaining second place in the broad jump. In the 88-yard run Landacre of North furnished a great deal of excitement by passing Pratt of Doane in the last few feet. Horst of North, in the second event, showed very good form. Rankin, in the discus, easily defeated the Doane entire with a throw of 91 feet 9 inches. For Doane, Rupp, Freeman and Mitchell, the captain, showed up well.

NOTABLE EVENTS OF SATURDAY'S GAMES

Cunningham of Washington made a triple and three singles off Lefty Russell.

Nunamaker, Boston Red Sox catcher, made three hits off Russell Ford and accepted twelve chances, five of them assists.

Elmer Flick made three hits in four times up for Toledo.

Midkiff, Irving and Kirsch of Akron, secured homers.

A triple play executed by Roach, Gardner and Chase featured the New York-Boston game.

Magge of the Phillies connected for a single, double and homer.

Wagner helped the Pirates to win by making a triple and home run.

Ingerton, Cleveland boy with Boston, made three hits in four times up, two of them being good for four bases.

Rhoades held Indianapolis to five hits.

Portsmouth made twenty-one hits off Lima hurlers.

Cris made a single, double and home run off Mollin.

Hinchman and Congiato made three hits apiece for Columbus.

WESLEYAN WINS FROM DENISON IN CLOSE GAME

Delaware, O., May 8.—In a game that lasted little more than an hour, Ohio Wesleyan scored a victory over Denison here Saturday afternoon by a score of 7 to 5. Batteries—Jewell and Briggs; Rupp and Holt. Umpire—Kramer.

Three double plays, one by Wesleyan and two by the visitors, were features of the early part of the contest. Jones of the Methodists pulled off a trick play in the fifth when he crouched in the pitcher's box, made a fake throw to first, drawing Rupp far enough off second to secure the third out of the inning.

In the seventh round a foul tip caught Catcher Briggs on the tongue, and on the next play a bad bing to second let in Denison's first and only rally. Score:

Wesleyan	AB.	R.	H.	O.	A.	E.
Denison	10	5	7	2	1	0
Wesleyan	10	7	5	3	2	0

Batteries—Jewell and Briggs; Rupp and Holt. Umpire—Kramer.

NEWARK HIGH LOST TO NORTH

The Columbus North High School baseball team triumphed over the Newark nine at Wehrle Park in a close, and interesting game, full of sensational fielding and timely hitting. The game seemed safe for the Columbus Reds until the seventh inning, when Nehls cleared the sacks with a drive to the middle field fence. Here the scoring was stopped by some sharp fielding on the part of both teams. For North, Nicklaus and Poulton did some timely hitting, while Green and Rhoades starred in the field. Hunter, a new man at third, played well. For Newark, Brown and Wright did the best fielding, while Nehls drove out two timely hits. Score:

North	AB.	R.	H.	O.	A.	E.
Newark	10	5	7	2	1	0
North	10	7	5	3	2	0

Batteries—Nicklaus and K. Miller; Ward, Hughes and Brown.

WANTS A GAME.

Union Station O., dedicated the Granville Daisies yesterday afternoon by a score of 7 to 5. Batteries for Union Station—Lovel and Dilline, Strawn and Harnet; for Granville Daisies—Welsh and Lyons. Union Station would like to hear from some Newark team or near villages. Write E. A. Dilline, Box 12, Union Station, O.

MIAMI, GE DENISON, 48.

Granville, O., May 8.—Miami University defeated Denison in the dual track meet here Saturday afternoon 61 to 38, largely through the fine work of Mc Coy and Parker. The meet was close and exciting throughout and the score was tied up to the last three events. Carman of Denison ran in good form. The local record for the pole vault was broken, Sellers, of Miami going ten feet.

One That Infuses New Life, New Strength, New Energy.

Poor health is responsible for most pessimists. If you're generally run down in health, if you're nervous and dispirited, then everything looks blue. But don't lay the blame to circumstance. Circumstances, perhaps, are a little or nothing to do with it. Your appetite has probably gone—nothing tastes good, you can't sleep, wake up tired and start the day wrong. What are you going to do about it? Let it go on? It's easier to get well—and a thousand times more satisfactory.

Morse's Glyceroide will bring back the old buoyancy, make you look again on the bright side of things. Moreover, the effect is immediate, delightful, exhilarating, marvellously invigorating. Every ounce of it is properly and thoroughly assimilated. Morse's Glyceroide in reality has no equal as a tissue, blood and nerve builder. Get a bottle today and watch yourself get well.

GRANVILLE VISITED BY BURGLARS

Lowery's Shoe Store Entered and $50 Worth of Footgear Missing. Work in Gas Fields.

Granville, May 8.—For the first time in months Granville was disturbed Saturday night by burglars. Some days ago Mr. J. W. Lowery, father of Millard Lowery, who graduated from Denison University two years ago, purchased the shoe store of B. C. Belt in this place. When Mr. Lowery closed the store Saturday night everything was left as usual. Sunday morning when he visited the store he found that it had been entered during the night and that a large number of shoes had been carried off. Mr. Lowery made a hasty examination and is of the opinion that the value of the goods taken will amount to between $15 and $50. There is no clue to the identity of the robbers.

The Granville High School Commencement will be held on Thursday night, June 9.

Housecleaning, that irksome duty from which there is no escape, is now on, and in every neighborhood, from early morn to eventide, can be heard the crack of the carpetbeater. Just now father is having his innings. Of course, he could not be expected to stay at home and help through the ordeal. He must remain away to give his work and business undivided attention. But father is always glad when housecleaning is done. The atmosphere in the house sometimes is not so genial and the meals not quite so good at this period as at other times.

Miss Mildred Langley of Cleveland, who has been spending a few days here, returned home Monday.

Mr. James Geist, field superintendent for the Ohio Fuel Supply company in West Virginia, with headquarters at Spencer, was in the village the latter part of last week, visiting his nephew, Otis King.

The Heisey company has started three different wells on the Owens farm, a short distance east of the village, but the drillers were unable to land the drive pipe on account of quicksand, and the last rig has just been torn down. It has not as yet been decided whether or not another location will be made on this land.

Sunday was a glorious day, and the churches were all well attended. Hundreds of people were out walking enjoying the balmy and invigorating air, while numerous auto parties from Columbus and Newark visited the village. In the early evening the hill tops were alive with people.

At a special meeting of Center Star Lodge of Masons of this place the M. M. degree was conferred on one candidate. Mr. A. L. Rawlings, district lecturer, of Newark was present and inspected the lodge.

It is the intention of the Board of Trustees of Denison to secure a professor of astronomy next fall. As yet he has not been chosen.

The regular monthly meeting of the public library will be held this evening, May 8, at 7 o'clock, when it is desired that as many of the members as can possibly do so be present.

LICKING COUNTY HAS 10 DELEGATES

Ohio's Fifty-second State Sunday school convention will be held at Dayton on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, June 6, 7 and 8. It promises to be the greatest of Ohio's long series of notable State conventions. Twelve specialists of international reputation have been engaged to teach and lecture in this great institute.

Each county is entitled to ten official delegates, appointed by the county officers. Hundreds of Sunday schools will send official visitors.

CURES INDIGESTION

A 25-Cent Box of English Marhué Speedily Puts the Stomach in Shape.

Evans' Drug Store, with characteristic enterprise, has succeeded in landing the agency for English Marhué the new successful remedy for all stomach ills.

If the dyspeptics of Newark take as kindly to English Marhué as dyspeptics in other cities have, there will be a larger number of comfortable stomachs in town than ever before.

Think of getting for only 25 cents a remedy that will banish all stomach misery in a few days. But English Marhué does more. It tones up the system, purifies the blood and clears the complexion.

Try it for Neuralgia, dizziness, night sweats and nervousness. Mail orders filled, charges prepaid, by Rheuma Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for free trial box.

WORRY AND HURRY

are the two greatest foes to digestion—and very few people reach the age of forty without falling a victim to indigestion in some form or other. Undigested food is a serious menace to health and is the cause of headaches, sleeplessness, flatulency, despondency, nervousness, bad breath and impure blood.

In such cases Vinol has a marked beneficial result. It seems to go directly to the seat of trouble, strengthens and tones up the third, weakened nerves of the stomach, enabling one to digest with ease the very foods that once caused distress.

A case has just come to our attention in Barre, Vt. Mr. Samuel Wheeler suffered with a stomach trouble for years and had taken all kinds of medicines without relief, and at last found a cure in Vinol. He says Vinol was worth five dollars a bottle to him. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

If you suffer from any form of stomach trouble, try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. F. D. Hall, druggist, Newark.

FIRE SUNDAY MORNING DOES $300 DAMAGE

A blaze of unknown origin threatened to destroy the home of Mrs. Rudolph Esert, at 353 Washington street at an early hour Sunday morning and the prompt arrival of the fire department and its effective work was all that prevented the complete destruction of the building and contents.

The blaze was discovered shortly after 2 o'clock, the alarm being received at headquarters at 2:15. Both trucks from the Central house and the East Newark truck responded and when the firemen arrived the blaze was burning merrily.

Several streams were soon playing on the flames, and in a short time the fire was under control.

The fire started in a lean-to addition in the rear of the dwelling but its cause is not known. The entire shed was burned to the ground and the siding on the rear of the house proper was all burned off. The roof was also badly damaged.

Much of the furnishing was damaged by fire and water. The members of the family were aroused by those who discovered the flames and had little time to get into their clothes and escape from the dense smoke and intense heat. They were cared for by neighbors, the house being uninhabitable after the fire was extinguished.

The loss will be about $300 and is partly covered by insurance.

RED MEN ARE HOLDING THEIR STATE CONVENTION

A number of members of Minnewa Tribe of Red Men of this city left Monday for Lima, O., to attend the fifty-ninth annual state convention of the Improved Order of Red Men which convened in that city Monday for a four days' session. This convention is expected to prove the largest meeting of Red Men ever held in Ohio, and 236 representatives from as many lodges will be in attendance, together with a number of delegates from the Daughters of Pocahontas. During the week 500 candidates will be initiated, the work being put on by crack teams. Hon. George B. G. Griggs of Texas, Great Inchoonee of the United States, will review the parade.

How the Brush is Built

--- $450.00 ---

Today's Talk on "The Brush Transmission"

The transmission and clutches are contained in a stationary oil-tight case. They require no adjustment, but the entire transmission mechanism, with case and shaft, can be removed, if necessary, as a single unit.

The transmission is the well-known Brush gear set, generally acknowledged to be the most durable and satisfactory two-speed transmission in use. Combined with it are multiple disc clutches with a simple self-setting arrangement, eliminating the spring-and-thrust bearing generally used in clutches. The action of the clutches is soft, yet positive, and the gears are noiseless. A single lever of selective action, having two positions on the inside and one on the outside, controls the two speeds forward, the reverse and the emergency brake. The foot pedal releases the clutch before setting the brake, a safety and convenience feature not found in any other low-priced car.

For general purpose usage The Brush is in a class by itself. No other car at anywhere near the price approaches its high standard of efficiency. By all means see a Brush before you buy.
